Not illustrated. 1914 Excerpt: . the axis is north and south the light received on the two sides must be equivalent and there can be but slight difference in the amount of rainfall. The soil being residual derived from the weathering of the same rocks cannot have differed, in the beginning at least, in any important respect on the two sides. The only obvious difference between the two slopes is the condition of the surface of the ground. The west slope is covered Avith a desp carpet of fallen leaves and leaf mold while the opposite slope is swept bare of leaves by the wind so that there is little or no humus formed and the ground is somewhat more exposed to erosion from surface runoff. The soil of the west bank gives a neutral or faintly acid reaction to litmus paper. That of the east bank, on the other hand, gives a very strong and almost instantaneous red reaction. This is remarkable in view of the abundance of organic remains which must liberate various acids in course of humification in the neutral soil while the opposite acid bank is free from any such source of acidity. Repeated tests throughout the area have uniformly shown that wherever the characteristic upland forest develops, there the soil gives a strongly acid reaction to litmus paper. The soil of the lowland forest, on the other hand, always gives a faintly acid or neutral reaction to the same test. Although such conditions have often...
