Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Conduct of the Protestant Methodists: In Leaving the Old Connexion, Brought to the Test of Their Own Professions; In a Second Letter Addressed to the Private Members of That Community Respected Friends, The design of my first Letter was to shew that our ministry, and the more important parts of our discipline, have Scripture authority for their support; and that in departing from us you have departed from the word of God. If my arguments cannot be overturned, and of that I am under no apprehension, the sinfulness of your secession cannot be denied; and your plain path of duty is to repent of your rashness, to flee from your seducers, and to return to the fold of Christ which you have deserted. I know you will feel some reluctance to retrace your steps; shame, and other kindred feelings, will operate powerfully to prevent a retreat; but since conscience, if you will allow it to speak, must condemn your late conduct, you can only enjoy peace of mind in humbling yourselves, confessing your fault,...
