Henry Huth was born in the year 1815, and being destined by his father to enter the Indian Civil Service, was sent for preparation to Mr. Rusden's school at Leith Hill, in Surrey, where he soon became a favourite pupil. Here he learned Latin, Greek, and French (Spanish was his mother-tongue); and had also got well on with Hindustani, Persian, and Arabic, when, in 1833, the East India Company lost their charter, and his father took him away from the school. While yet a school-boy, he had taken a great and spontaneous interest in natural science, especially in physics and chemistry: all his pocket-money was devoted to the necessary purchase of apparatus, and sometimes he sold his old school-books for the same purpose. On one of these occasions, however, his attention was captivated by a work of Gervase Markham's, which he bought instead of the chemicals. Soon after, his father, finding him reading a book on chemistry, procured him a regular teacher; and thus his pocket-money was set free to be nearly all spent on his new and lasting fancy for curious books. In 1833 he was sent abroad, first to the United States, then Mexico, France, and Germany; and in all these countries he made a few slight additions to his collection, but was especially...
